

Safer London Bootcamp report 2022

“ I'm so happy that I'm with people who have similar experiences, we're on the same page and our voices can be heard ”

Who?

There are 9 children and young people signed onto the programme, the Bootcamp saw a 45% attendance due to individual extenuating-circumstances

How helpful do you think it was for your role?

Will you continue on the project?

outcome

Throughout this two-day event, the young Londoners had plenty of time to get to know each other, build rapport, find commonalities and become friends. This is a strong fundamental team and we all can't wait to see what develops from here! Overall, based on the feedback- objectives were met. But we will continue to build upon this in sessions moving forward.

summary

As our kick-start Bootcamp to bring the young champions alongside our existing VIPs our first objective was to bring the team together through team building, games and all-around fun!

Our first workshop centred around the role and its link to Safer London. The young Londoners were asked to explore personas, one for London; if the city was a person what would they be like and the second personas for the young champion role, what characteristics should they have, what they currently bring to the role and what can we build on. Following this, we explored what they currently liked about Safer London, what they didn't like and what they would like to see developed. This gave us great insight into our next steps and how the young representatives feel.

The workshop on the second day dived more towards the social media for LDN_Voices, developed originally by young Londoners of safer London to support other young Londoners. In this workshop, we looked at their initial opinions on a scale followed by what content would like to see, what they would like to be involved in and actions toward how we can develop this into our programme, supported by Kate, the Safer London digital comms officer.

“ I like the feeling of helping people who have gone through situations like me... I'm really excited for next year with Safer London. ”
